Dear Members of the European Beekeeping Association,

I am writing to express my unwavering support for the European beekeeping industry and its fight against counterfeit bee products. It is clear that this issue, which directly threatens not only the livelihood of beekeepers but also the health of European citizens, deserves immediate and collective action.

As a Member of the European Parliament, I fully recognize the gravity of the situation described in your plea. The alarming reality that nearly half of the honey on the market could be counterfeit is not only a blow to consumers but also undermines the centuries-old traditions of European beekeepers, who have dedicated themselves to providing pure and natural products. Counterfeit honey endangers both the beekeeping industry and the pollination services that are vital to European agriculture.

Food security is one of the core pillars of any nation's stability, and it is closely tied to the integrity of agricultural practices. Without healthy, thriving bee populations, our agricultural production will suffer, leading to further issues with food quality and availability. Counterfeit food not only harms the economy and agricultural sector, but it also puts public health at serious risk. Allowing this to continue unchecked would be a severe oversight on our part as policymakers.

I stand firmly with the European Beekeeping Association in your appeal to all European politicians to take necessary steps to protect beekeepers and consumers alike. Ensuring the authenticity and quality of bee products is crucial not just for our economies but for the well-being of future generations. I fully support the proposals the EBA is set to present in October, and I will do everything in my capacity to advocate for their swift adoption within the European Parliament and the relevant ministries.

Let us join forces to safeguard Europe's agricultural integrity and ensure that natural, authentic bee products are the only option available to our citizens. Together, we can work to stop the flow of counterfeit food and preserve the invaluable tradition of beekeeping in Europe.

Yours sincerely,
